

The Sandhill crane is a wetland bird.
It nests in the Pitt Polder.
There are only nine cranes left.

The sandhill crane is a tall gray bird.
It has long skinny legs.
It has a red crown of bumpy skin on its head.

Sandhill cranes nest on the ground.
They build their nests out of leaves and moss.
The female crane lays two eggs.

Cranes eat plants and animals.
They eat berries, roots, and seeds.
They eat insects, frogs, and mice.

Coyotes, foxes, raccoons, and bobcats are the crane's enemies.

1. How many sandhill cranes live in the Pitt Polder? _____

2. What colour is the sandhill crane's crown? _____

3. Where do the sandhill cranes nest? _____

4. What does the sandhill crane eat? _____